ARRESTS IN CALLIERS BURIAL CASE ARE EXPECTED TO-DAY; KELLY'S LICENSE ATTACKED

Volume Witness Refutes Undertaker's Unsworn To Statement.
NEW EVIDENCE GIVEN.
Sweeping Reforms in System Planned as Many Investigations Continue.

Arrests are looked for to-day as a result of the investigations following the exposure in The Evening World of the secret burial of Mrs. Anna Callies with false records and before her daughter knew of her death. The District Attorney's office will institute a criminal charge of falsifying public records and the Health Department will institute a civil prosecution.

Dr. William H. Guilfooy, Register of Records, has also recommended to Health Commissioner Copeland that the evidence procured in his investigation be sent to the Board of Embalmers at Albany, which will take up the matter of revoking the license of George H. Kelly, the undertaker of No. 337 Columbus Avenue, who had charge of the burial.

Assistant District Attorney P. Frank Marro to-day issued subpoenas to several witnesses to appear before the Additional Grand Jury to-morrow, when the case of Bartholomew Sullivan, whose death killed Mrs. Callies on Oct. 9 on Broadway at 83d Street, will be submitted. Sullivan, first accused of murder in the second degree, was freed by the Additional Grand Jury for lack of evidence.

New evidence in the Callies case was given before Assistant District Attorney Lester Lazarus yesterday afternoon by Matthew Lough, seventy-five years old, living at Mills Street, Seventh Avenue and 36th Street, who was in the employ of Undertaker Kelly at the time Mrs. Callies was buried.

He told a most enlightening story of the workmen in Mr. Kelly's establishment and freely admitted that he had left because of a disagreement with Mr. Kearney, the assistant. He said he had been employed there from May last to Nov. 17. He flatly contradicted Mr. Kelly's testimony given before Dr. William H. Guilfooy, Register of Records, earlier this week in which he denied all knowledge of the case. His testimony in a large part corroborated Mr. Kelly's own testimony sworn to before Dr. Charles Norris, Chief Medical Examiner, when he professed to be thoroughly familiar with the facts. This was shortly after the burial of Mrs. Callies, when the daughter started her complaint of the handling of the case. Before Mr. Guilfooy the undertaker denied all knowledge of the case and said Kearney had handled it.

SAYS HOSPITAL NIGHT CLERK CALLED UP KELLY.

Lough declared Mr. Bryant, night clerk at Roosevelt Hospital, had called up Mr. Kelly's establishment and informed them of the death of Mrs. Callies. He said that the body had never been brought to the under-

The first zero weather of the winter came early to-day and brought with it the usual train of accidents, frozen pipes and other inconveniences.

While New York City was enjoying many cities up-State were colder. The coldest point was Big Moose, where the thermometer showed 24 below zero. At Wright Settlement, near Rome, it was 25 below, Tupper Lake 25 and Lake Placid and Saranac Lake 22 below.

The lowest temperature recorded at the Weather Bureau in the Whitehall building was zero. This was between 6 and 7 o'clock this morning, but the big thermometer in front of the Pulitzer Building showed the mercury at two degrees below at that hour. This is the lowest record for the year and also for nearly two years.

The mercury dropped rapidly last night and at midnight it was two degrees above zero. With a biting wind blowing, the temperature rose to six degrees lower. Lack of fuel in steam-heated apartments caused many suffering in thousands of homes. Even where they had heat it was turned off at 10 o'clock in the evening.

Hundreds of thousands going to work in the morning this morning, and after leaving the wind and blowing snows they were packed into the cold as refrigerators.

No doubt directly due to the cold were reported that of Mr. Earl Kaplan, 65 years old, of No. 894 Sackman Street, Brooklyn, who collapsed on the steps of No. 337 Columbus Street, was attributed to the weather indirectly. An ambulance surgeon said the man's failure due to hurrying to get home to escape the cold.

Adolph Katschy, seventy of No. 157 Norfolk Street, slipped on the steps of his building and is believed to have suffered a fractured skull. Patrolman Charles K. of No. 148 First Avenue, slipped on the curb at 16th Street and Eighth Avenue and fractured a leg.

Although several thousand persons applied to institutions for shelter, the number was far less than during similar weather in the past. This decrease was attributed to the more general employment of men this year.

In this vicinity people shiver to cloudy weather is indicated during the next thirty-six hours, with probable occasional snow flurries. The temperature is said to be in the twenties, but it will still be low.

MAN MEETS DEATH IN BROOKLYN FIRE; 500 FLEE IN COLD

Watchman Killed in Cellar Trying to Fight Flames in Brooklyn Store Alone.
MANY FLEE HALF GLAD.
Firemen Work in Icy Water—Police and K. C. Find Refuge for Victims.

One man was burned to death and thousands of dollars' worth of furniture damaged in a fire which started at 7 o'clock this morning in the cellar of the big department store of Deutsch Brothers, Nos. 1180-1184 Broadway, Brooklyn.

James Sweeting, sixty years old, the night watchman, of No. 116 Penn Street, Brooklyn, was found dead in the cellar when the firemen arrived. He had evidently tried to fight the fire alone.

Three alarms were turned in in rapid succession, as the fire worked its way to the first floor.

Hundreds of persons stood shivering in the cold watching the firemen battle with the blaze. Tenants in nearby houses were sent from their homes by police and firemen as a precautionary measure. The building of two blocks from Mayor Hylan's home.

The cellar drainage in the burning building was impeded and firemen fought the glass-stander knee deep in icy water in the cellar. The outside of the building quickly became slick with ice.

The Broadway trolley line service was cut off for more than an hour, because of the elevated lines which run by the store were almost completely blocked by the smoke from the fire.

More than 500 persons, scores of whom in nightclothes, were driven out into the zero weather early today by fires on the west side. Their suffering was so intense they were immediately taken into the Knights of Columbus headquarters in West Fifty-fourth Street and into restaurants and homes in the neighborhood.

One of the fires was in a dancing academy at No. 915 Eighth Avenue. Another in the basement printing plant of the Pulitzer School of Journalism at Broadway and 116th Street, drove to the street a number of girl students in Peralta Hall, a secondary next door, but they had time to dress.

The temperature was the lowest in two years. The descent of the mercury had been so rapid many driven out the streets by the fire had no idea how cold it was until they reached the open air.

The blaze in Remey's Dancing Academy, second floor of the three-story building in Eighth Avenue, was going through the roof by the time the firemen arrived shortly after 1 A. M. A second alarm was sounded.

POLICEMEN ON PATROL SAID TO HAVE BEEN MASTER MINDS IN PLOTTING BIG BURGLARIES

"Most Dangerous Criminals Now at Large," Declares District Attorney.
SHIELDED BY UNIFORM.
One, Disgruntled, Said to Have Confessed—Woman Held as Witness.

A condition without precedent in the New York Police Department was revealed today by District Attorney Lewis in Brooklyn, when he accused a Patrolman, Herman Crause, of being the leader of a gang of burglars and asked that Crause and Policeman Peter Hueger, both accused of directing the robbery of a fur store at No. 713 Herkimer Street, Brooklyn, on Nov. 20, each to be held in $50,000 bail. Judge McMahon, in the Kings County Court fixed the bail bonds accordingly.

"This Policeman Crause and others under arrest or at large, who have been associated with him are the most dangerous criminals in this State," declared the District Attorney. Crause was an active, energetic burglar working behind the shield of a policeman's uniform.

"He was practically the owner of a barber shop on his beat. He seldom made any pretense of doing patrol. He would make his headquarters in this barber shop and his associates in burglary would call there and they would plan their jobs. Crause worked in Manhattan as well as in Brooklyn and the total value of the loot gathered in by him in the last six months runs into the hundreds of thousands of dollars."

"The striking Boston policemen were worthy of commendation when compared with this pair," continued the District Attorney. "I want the jail made so high that nobody will take a chance with it and I want the trial to be held as soon as possible."

Next week if I can get a Judge to take it on—because the gang of criminals controlled by Crause and a couple of other master minds would not hesitate to attempt to interfere with the course of justice in the courts."

Edward Werle, charged with being one of the burglars who robbed the Hoopla, N. J., National Bank several weeks ago, was indicted for the Herkimer Street robbery as a fourth offender.

Mrs. Hattie Kane, a tall, good-looking woman of about twenty-five years, who came into court wearing furs worth at least $2,000, was arraigned as a material witness, not under indictment, in $10,000 bail. District Attorney Lewis said she was the graduate of a Brooklyn high school, a member of an excellent family and had lived at Werle's apartment at No. 103 Charles Street, Manhattan, and had witnessed the division of spoils of many burglaries there.

Edward Cannon, chauffeur of the truck said to have been loaded by the policemen and others with the stolen furs in Herkimer Street, was held in $2,000 bail. The prosecutor said that Cannon was to aid him in further investigation. Philip Brown and Samuel Singer, also indicted, were held in $50,000 each.

ASKS THAT SWANN PAY FOR INQUIRY OF HIS OWN OFFICE

Proskauer's Demands in Grand Jury Investigation Set Prosecutor Guessing.
WANTS FULL CONTROL.
Adviser Insists on Having Free Rein and Choosing His Staff of Assistants.

District Attorney Swann was deliberating up to a late hour this afternoon over a proposition to finance an investigation of himself, put up to him by Joseph Proskauer, the attorney who, at the suggestion of Gov. Smith, has been designated by Mr. Swann to serve as a Special Assistant District Attorney to advise the Extraordinary Grand Jury in an investigation of various city departments and the District Attorney's office.

Foreman Almiral has tendered the complete co-operation of the Grand Jury, but suggested that, inasmuch as the conditions in the office of the District Attorney are among the matters to be investigated, Mr. Proskauer should be entirely free, in conjunction with the Grand Jury, to conduct such investigations without the dictation or control of the District Attorney, and to select his own assistants and determine his own methods and means of investigation, with adequate provision for meeting expenses.

Mr. Proskauer sent to District Attorney Swann a letter which read, in part, as follows:

"Your ready acquiescence in the Governor's suggestion of my appointment leads me to hope that you will agree to the propriety of the following understanding in the event that I take the oath of office:

"First, that I shall have independent control over the matters brought before the Grand Jury and over its investigations and, second, that you will, from your contingent fund, for through application to the proper authority if your contingent fund is insufficient, supply me with the necessary money to organize a reasonable staff of assistants to be appointed on my nomination."

Mr. Proskauer also enclosed a copy of the letter written to him by Foreman Almiral.

When brings up to the District Attorney in a contemplative mood. He is asked to furnish out of his contingent fund, an undetermined sum of money which is to be devoted to a searching investigation of his own office. Friends of the District Attorney were disposed to doubt if he would sacrifice his contingent fund under such circumstances.

"And if his contingent fund is insufficient he is asked to get the money for the investigation into his office and various city departments from the Board of Estimate. The impression that the Board of Estimate would refuse to appropriate as much as a two-cent stamp toward said investigation is practically unanimous."

MARINE KILLED, THREE HURT IN FIRE AND EXPLOSIONS IN ARSENAL NEAR DOVER, N. J.

Blasts in Government Experimental Research Building Felt Fifty Miles Away—Men Suffer in Cold—Loss Put at $50,000.

DOVER, N. J., Dec. 18.—A series of explosions following a fire in the experimental research building of the United States Picatinny Arsenal, six miles north of here, shortly after midnight, caused the death of one member of the Marine Corps and seriously injured three others.

When the fire was brought under control by the marine guard and volunteers from neighboring towns as far away as Morristown, three hours later, four buildings had been destroyed and the damage was estimated at $50,000.

Explosions were so violent that they were felt fifty miles away. The dead Marine is:

Private Oliver McCormick, Malden, Mass., hip shattered by a shrapnel shell, while carrying hose into ammunition storehouse.

The more seriously injured are Private Edward D. Butler, Memphis, Tenn., fractured skull, expected to recover; Private Ralph Lucas, Tipton, Mich., contusions of body and head; Private Paul A. Green, Cleveland, contusions of head and body.

A photographer had a remarkable escape from death. He was asleep in the Administration Building, which was close to the experimental laboratory, but escaped with a bad shakedown.

Immediately after the explosion, Col. F. H. Miles jr., commander of the arsenal, took charge of the fight against the flames. He first directed the efforts of the soldiers and civilian guard. These were quickly reinforced by marines from barracks at the naval powder depot, which is within a comparatively short distance of the arsenal.

Col. Miles this afternoon issued the following statement on the explosion and fire:

"At 12:05 o'clock this morning fire started in one of the research laboratory buildings and was discovered by an arsenal guard, who sounded an alarm. A few minutes later there was a slight explosion, which was followed by a larger explosion, which caused most of the damage. Windows in the administration building, machine shop and chemical laboratory were damaged. The principal loss is in the small research laboratory and paint shop, comprising about six buildings, covering an area of 25 by 100 yards. The guards of the arsenal were assisted by the members of the Marine Corps in preventing a spread of the flames. A member of the guard sustained minor injuries."

Col. Miles estimated the damage at $50,000. He said that he would go ahead on the work on the increased facilities.

FIGHT FIRE WITH SHELLS WHIZZING IN AIR.

The marines upheld the traditions of their corps in fighting the fire in zero weather. A detail took a line of hose and advanced with it until they could throw the stream into the building, although shell fragments were whizzing through the air with frequency and shells hurtled upward in long, arched flight, trailed by a stream of fire. All the Marine casualties were suffered at this nozzle.

Incidents far miles around, believing it was "the end of the world," rushed out into the open on hearing the explosions, where the mercury was below zero. They were reassured when told it was the arsenal.

One hundred men and boys who volunteered as firemen went from here in automobiles. During the early hours the flames were visible for miles, and some of the explosions could be heard as far as Trenton. It was said 500 or 600 men were generally employed at the plant during the day, but at night no one was about except Government officers, guards and watchmen.

Red Cross workers rushed to the scene in automobiles bringing first aid kits, coffee and sandwiches. Ambulances were sent from here and other places.

The naval powder depot is on a hill to the east of the arsenal. The two

CARS REMAIN COLD AS NIXON SCOLDS TRACTION CHIEFS

WHEN Public Service Commissioner Nixon came downtown this morning, he found his office swamped with complaints and called up President Hedley of the Interborough.

"Why, Mr. Nixon," exclaimed Mr. Hedley, "we used 212,000 kilowatts in the rush hour this morning, and you know the average is 170,000."

Mr. Nixon said that if an improvement "improvement" was not made he would call a public meeting to-morrow and "drastic action" would be taken. That means a "preemptory order" for more heat—or at least for SOME heat.

Mr. Nixon said the indicator in his car showed "this number" of heat, which if turned on for a sufficient period would be a sure way to get a green light.

Incidents from Nixon's office show that the heat is being turned on in a number of cases by day but not on heating apparatus. Mr. Nixon ordered them taken "off" or service "at once."
